Peterborough Location

Peterborough is a cathedral city and unitary authority area in the East of England. The city is situated on the River Nene, which flows into the North Sea approximately 30 miles (48 km) to the north-east. The local landscape to the east of the city is flat and low-lying, and in some places lies below sea level although there is higher ground to the west of the city.

The area known as the Fens falls to the east and north-east of Peterborough. The City of Peterborough is a unitary authority and borders Northamptonshire and Rutland to the west, Lincolnshire to the north, and Cambridgeshire to the south and east.

Peterborough is surrounded by beautiful countryside, including 2,000 acres of riverside parkland, including Ferry Meadows and the Nene Park, and there is access to a vast range of outdoor leisure activities to enjoy.

There are a number of other towns and villages located within commuting distance of Peterborough which may be worth considering if you wish to live outside of Peterborough itself.

A useful map showing these areas can be found on the Peterborough City Council website:

<http://hawkeye.peterborough.gov.uk/CNET49Live/CMPro/default.aspx?getmap=true&scale=500000&location=517077.354166667^304677.541666667&layersidentifier=9f4daa1cc60c490490bb8412af9c1f64&Workspace=Hawkeye&backgroundmap=MapDefaultLayerNames>

Urban areas of the city include Bretton, Dogsthorpe, Eastfield, Eastgate, Fengate, Fletton, Gunthorpe, Hampton, Longthorpe, Millfield, New England, Netherton, The Ortons, Parnwell, Paston, Stanground, Walton, Werrington, West Town, Westwood and Woodston.

Villages in the district include Ailsworth, Bainton, Barnack, Borough Fen, Castor, Deeping Gate, Eye, Glington, Helpston, Marholm, Maxey, Newborough, Northborough, Peakirk, Sutton, Thorney, Thornhaugh, Ufford, Upton, Wansford and Wittering.

Living in Peterborough

If you take a look at what is going on in Peterborough you will find that there is more to the city than its truly magnificent cathedral. The city's population has more than doubled in the last forty years and there are a number of significant development projects taking place in the centre to ensure that it continues to grow. Property prices are among the lowest in the South and East of England, coupled with the fact that this is the most successful economy in the region. Peterborough's appeal for those people considering relocating away from some of the more populated conurbations, particularly in and around the capital just 50 minutes away by train, is increasing apace.

Getting Around

Commuting to the city centre and surrounding area is not as troublesome as you might expect for a city that has a population of over 160,000 people, even during the rush hour.

Peterborough's network of dual carriageway 'parkways' have been purposefully designed to cope with the demand of an increased population. They make it easy to get around without having to go through the city centre, with the city being located next to the North-South A1(M) motorway and the East-West A47. In the centre itself, there are around a dozen short and long term car parks.

Despite its large-scale growth, Peterborough has the fastest peak and off-peak travel times for a city of its size in the UK. This is a major factor contributing to the city's status as one of only four Environment Cities in the UK that is committed to providing sustainable transport, with bus and train travel widely promoted and increasingly becoming the favoured form of transport for commuters.

Both the train and bus station are located on the opposite side of the Queensgate shopping centre with the bus station service connecting every part of the city and the surrounding villages. Peterborough is connected by rail with the nearby towns of Stamford, Grantham, Ely, March, Whittlesey and Huntingdon along with direct connections to some of the largest cities in the regions such as Cambridge, Northampton and London.

Residential Areas

Despite being located next to one of the most expensive property counties in England, Cambridgeshire, house prices to income ratio in Peterborough are significantly lower. This makes the city one of the most affordable locations in the South and East and is a major selling point for people considering moving to the region.

The new Hampton area on the southern perimeter of the city, one of the four areas that were earmarked for development when Peterborough was designated a new town, will eventually provide an additional 7,300 homes. A number of new homes are being built to meet increased demand for modern housing in other areas of the city, such as the Cardea community project to the east of the City and the planned Paston Reserve development to the North East.

House Prices

House prices and council tax in Peterborough are well below regional and national averages. In July 2016, the average house price in Peterborough was around £170,682 compared with an East of England regional average of around £273,806 and national average of £216,750 (figures from Land Registry House Price Index).

If you are renting a property, you will usually be asked to provide at least one month's rent as a deposit and your first month's rent in advance. You may also be asked to provide an employment reference to confirm your income – we are happy to do this for you if you have secured a post with us.

Working in Peterborough

The cathedral city of Peterborough is currently experiencing an economic boom that has positioned it as the most successful economy in the East of England, having jostled for the title with Luton for a number of years. Since being designated as a New Town in 1968, Peterborough's population has continued to soar and so too has its business community.

The city is one of the UK's leading centres for new business start-ups and expansion. Several decades of rapid growth have created a rich, diverse and vibrant city that has a successful track record in attracting businesses to the region and firmly established its status as one of the strongest economies in the country.

For almost 800 years Peterborough passed through history in unremarkable fashion, existing as little more than a market town until the defunct Abbey was re-classified as a cathedral, thereby making Peterborough a 'city' – albeit a small one even by the standards of the time standing at just 1,500 people. By the mid nineteenth century an iron, brick making and elastic webbing manufacturing sector had evolved and the arrival of the railways saw Peterborough quickly become one of the most important industrial centres in the East of England. By 1901 the population of Peterborough stood at around 30,000.

However, the city's fortunes were to change irrevocably when the Government included Peterborough in its New Town scheme – a scheme designed to relieve the housing congestion in London. Despite already having a significant population of over 80,000 people, it was decided to double this to about 160,000 and in 1968, a Development Corporation was formed to build three new suburban areas, Bretton, Orton and Werrington.

In common with the national decline in manufacturing and heavy industry, employment within these sectors has fallen in recent years and Peterborough has diversified as a post-industrial service economy. Indeed, around 80 per cent of all employment opportunities in the city are in the service sector, whilst fewer than 15 per cent can still be found in manufacturing and industry with the likes of British Sugar, Indesit, Perkins Engines, Dresser-Rand (Peter Brotherhood) and Baker Perkins providing the bulk of these jobs.

Peterborough's retail sector is also enjoying a boom which has been stimulated by the £1bn regeneration of the city centre. Peterborough already has an extensive shopping option and has plans for a new retail, leisure and entertainment hub at North Westgate which will include a flagship relocated Marks & Spencer. At present, around 11 per cent of the local workforce is employed in the retail sector.

Being the fastest growing economy in the East of England, Peterborough has seen a significant growth in the number of new business start-ups and existing business expansions in recent years. Spearheading this drive are the financial and professional services sectors which has become one of the key economic drivers in Peterborough. Responsible for around 11 per cent of the workforce, demand for jobs in this sector will inevitably rise as the population continues to soar, with Peterborough continuing to boast an impressive portfolio of leading organisations in the area including the head office for Churchill Insurance, the Norwich & Peterborough Building Society and BNP Paribas. Elsewhere, Barclays Personal Investment Management which employs 450 staff, Diligenta business process outsourcing specialists, and BGL, one of the largest personal lines intermediaries in the UK and parent company of Budget Insurance, with 1,200 workers.

Anglian Water is at the forefront of Peterborough's objective to become the UK centre for environmental industries. Indeed, Anglian Water's Thorpe Wood office tasks are focused on a large number of Sites of Special Scientific Interest and other areas of vulnerability such as wetlands and rivers. Peterborough Environment City Trust, Natural England and the Environment Agency also contribute to a sector that currently supports more than 4,500 jobs in the local area and account for over 5 per cent of the city's GDP.

What Anglian Water is doing for the environmental sector, EMAP is doing for the media sector. Having been based in the city for a number of years, EMAP is one of one of the leading magazine publishers in the UK and also one of the biggest employers in Peterborough, but there are also a number of smaller companies specialising in the fields of website design, newspaper publishing, TV and radio which employ thousands of people in the area.

Aside from the five key sectors above, there are a number of other employment industries which despite employing fewer numbers are vital contributors to the local economy. Travel companies Thomas Cook and Travelex are both headquartered in the city, with the former employing more than 1,500 people.

A Short History of Peterborough

The busy city of Peterborough, whose name is derived from its Norman Cathedral of St. Peter, lies in the northern corner of Cambridgeshire, on the north bank of the River Nene on the edge of the Fens.

Peterborough is an ancient and prosperous city, which has preserved its ancient heritage. Its origins are Saxon, but many prehistoric sites around the area indicate the land may have been farmed for 6,000 years. Flag Fen is an important Bronze Age site near Peterborough, where you can see 3,000 year old timbers preserved in peat.

The Norman Cathedral of St. Peter is built on the site of a monastery, which was destroyed by the Danes in 870 and rebuilt as a Benedictine foundation in 972. It was plundered by Hereward the Wake and later destroyed by fire. The present Cathedral was built by the Normans between 1118 and 1238, built of Barnack stone, with a tower reaching 143 feet. The interior is a splendid example of Norman architecture.

The 1850 opening of the Great Northern Railway's main line from London to York, transformed Peterborough from a market town to an industrial centre, particularly noted for brick manufacture. With this expansion came population growth, which continued through the next 100 years and with Peterborough's designation as a New Town in 1967.

Modern Peterborough is a thriving city which is once again undergoing rapid expansion, with development underway to accommodate another 40,000 people in an extra 22,000 homes and 18,000 jobs by 2020. A multi-million pound scheme to regenerate and rejuvenate Peterborough city centre has been developed to ensure that the city centre develops for the future in line with Peterborough's planned growth.

The current population of Peterborough is around 184,000. Peterborough is a richly diverse, multi-cultural, multi-racial and multi-faith city, with approximately 17.5% of Peterborough's population classifying themselves as belonging to a non-white ethnic minority group (2011 Census).
